

ABSTRACT

A method of scheduling a sequence of instructions is described. A target program is read, a pipeline control hazard is identified within the sequence of instructions, and a selected sequence of instructions is re-ordered. Two steps for re-ordering are applied to the selected sequence of instructions. First, a backward scheduling method is performed, and second, a forward scheduling method is performed.